

Dear

I am a loyal shopper and I am writing today to ask that you only offer dairy products in which the producing dairy cows were not caused any harm or pain. Your customers shop in your stores because we expect high quality foods that are good for our families. The use of antibiotics and hormones in your store brands would undermine my confidence in the quality of your products.

Dairy farmers have been forced in the past to rely on faulty milking equipment products that cause teat swelling/redness and damage to the teat canal lining, which results in scar tissue formation and udder deformities and inflicts pain throughout the milking process. However, there are now improved quality milking systems that milk cows in a gentle and humane manner enabling dairy farmers to produce a quality product, free of artificial hormones and substantially reduced mastitis (infection) levels.

I encourage you to explore the information provided at www.UdderlyBetterMilk.com regarding these issues. You may also visit www.CoPulsation.com for details of an improved milking system that addresses these concerns.

Please choose dairy products that have been produced using humane milking methods. The offering of quality dairy products will enable me to feel confident about shopping in your store.

Sincerely,
